Copyright Year + 96 Years = PD in USA

Copyright protection for most countries other than the USA expires 70 years after the death of the last surviving author.

United States copyright law is found in Title 17 of the United States Code and is administered by the US Copyright Office. Legally a copyright means that a musician, author, or artist has a "limited duration monopoly" on anything he creates. The US Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, grants the government power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and inventions for limited times".

The Sonny Bono Copyright Act of 1992 established maximum copyright protection of 95 years for all copyright eligible creative works published before January 1, 1978.

The year published is considered a partial year, so a published work is under copyright for 95 years following the year of publication. When all possible copyright protection has expired, anyone can use the work in any manner they choose.

Detailed copyright duration information can be found at www.copyright.gov, Cornell, Stanford, and many other university law school websites.

All music, lyrics, sheet music pages, book covers, titles, pages, indexes, and other public domain images published 96 or more years ago are PD in the USA.

NATIONAL SONG

(WITH CHORUS AD LIBITUM.)

Arranged by S. JACKSON.

Maestoso.

The piano introduction is in 3/4 time, marked 'Maestoso'. It begins with a forte (f) dynamic, followed by a fortissimo (fz) section, then a decrescendo (dim:) and a ritardando (ritard.) section. The music is composed of chords and single notes in both hands.
